Trees give shade for the benefit of other, and while they themselves stand in the sun and endure the heat they produce the fruit which others profit. The character of good men is like that of trees. What is the use of this body if no use of its made for the benefit of mankind? Sandalwood the more it is rubbed, the more scent does it yield. Sugar cane the more it is peeled, and cut into pieces, the more juice does it produce.

Wood the more it is burnt the more brightly does it shine. The man who are noble at heart do not lose these qualities even by losing their lives. They dwell forever in a world of bliss because their noble qualities do not die with them. What matters is whether we praise them or not. Good men are indifferent to praise because their goodness does not depend upon man's empty praise. To live for the sake of mere living till the end of life is to live the life of dogs and crows.
